

Czech Archaeological Explorations in Egypt and Sudan

Miroslav Verner

It is more than 50 years since the International UNESCO Campaign to save the monuments of Nubia began and, ever since that time, the Czech archaeological team has been exploring, restoring and saving the Ancient Egyptian monuments. Our work has made an important contribution to the world historical and cultural heritage. The long-standing flagship of the Czech archaeologists in Egypt has been research in the pyramid field at Abusir, but they also work in the Egyptian Western Desert and, recently, in Sudan. Archaeological discoveries made by the Czech team have not only enriched Egyptian museums but they have significantly contributed to the better knowledge of the history of Ancient Egypt and its ancient culture.
